ABOUT BUDGETS . . .

Clackamas was defeated yesterday, their second try, and by approximately the same margin of votes percentage-wise as in the first election.

Nearly two out of every three bond elections held in Oregon school districts in 1972 were defeated. Only 15 of 42 bond issues were approved by voters.

Dear Don:

I had the opportunity to listen to Senator Boe talking on the Governor's tax package for schools at the Albany Chamber of Commerce breakfast on Friday, March 23rd. He did an excellent job in presenting materials in favor of passage, with which I certainly concur. I feel it is good legislation and I would support its approval.

However, I do have a concern about the presentations, and that concern is the confusion for the citizens on the method the community colleges will use for taxing in the future. Mr. Boe's presentation was not clear as to how community colleges will receive future funding. As a matter of fact, when asked who would have the power to tax in the future he did not include community colleges. It is imperative that people understand that community colleges are not part of the Governor's plan, and that they will have the ability to tax for operation and bonds in the future.

This especially would apply to schools like Linn-Benton Community College that do not have a tax base. It is important for our continued operation to be able to pass operational levies in the future.

Sincerely,
