Written communication is very important in the world we inhabit. The written word gives us history: What happened? To whom? When? Why? What caused it? What were the consequences? How does it compare to what happened before? Written communication seals our agreements. Who will do what? When? And how much will it cost. Written communication also helps us make sense of our own responses. And, as Julia Alvarez said, "I write to find out what I'm thinking. I write to find out who I am. I write to understand things."

This course has been designed to strengthen written communication by giving students practice in a number of writing situations and tailoring writing to a particular audience and rhetorical situation. Students will write in a variety of formats, revise and edit material to reflect college-level grammar, syntax, spelling, punctuation. Students will also have practice locating outside sources and effectively using them in written documents. They will learn to use in-text citations, appropriate documentation, and works cited sections.

Officially, when students complete WR121, they should be able to

1. Analyze the rhetorical needs (the needs of their audience in relationship to the assignment) for academically-oriented writing assignments requiring them to use a broad range of critical-thinking strategies, particularly analysis and evaluation.
2. Apply appropriate levels of critical thinking strategies (knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, evaluation) in their written work.
3. Implement appropriate rhetorical elements and organization (introduction, thesis, development and support, definition, narration, comparison, conclusion, etc.) in their written assignments.
4. Locate, evaluate, and integrate high-quality information and opinion appropriate for college-level analytical and evaluation assignments.
5. Craft sentences and paragraphs that communicate their ideas clearly and effectively using words, sentence patterns, and writing conventions at a college level to make their writing clear, credible, and persuasive.

Evaluation for the course will be based on

1. In class writings and responses,
2. Essays to be worked on independently or with a group and peer edited in class,
3. Reading notes as assigned
4. A final exam. The final will be in two parts over two days (Monday and Tuesday of Finals week) and will be worth 30% of the grade for the term.

Late papers receive a 10% penalty, but each student will receive a "Get out of jail free" card to be used with a late submission or for bonus points at the end of the term.

Since this is a course in which we write about our thoughts and ideas, we must each do our part to show respect for and to one another and our readers. Since we all want respect, we need to show respect -even to (especially to) those with whom we disagree.**

Additional Guidelines:

- Communicate with the instructor – preferably in person or by e-mail –if you have situations arise which make it impossible for you to be in class. If you communicate, I can help.
- *Type or word-process final revised paragraphs and essays (except those done in class or otherwise noted).
- *Rough drafts and peer comments/edits must be turned in with the revised essay assignments.
- *Plan for all work to be done on time... this includes drafts and revisions.
- *Plan to do your own work. You'll be learning how to give appropriate credit for information and/or quotations from others' work so that you will avoid plagiarism. When you do it yourself, you'll learn better!

Campus Resources:

- +Conferences with the instructor. I'll have office hours each day that I'm on campus. If those hours do not work for you, we can meet by appointment. (Turn over for office and office hours)
